

Principal's Message

Bonnie Billings

The spring edition of our newsletter is a testimony of how our parents, teachers, and community members have been part of the team effort to be a learning community and what it takes to support these outstanding young men and women in reaching their goals. We have the highest number of seniors that have been accepted at four-year universities since our school's opening seven years ago. It is a great time of the year to celebrate and a great time to revisit and refine our definition of a learning community. For me this means spending the time to reflect and being flexible enough to shift my thinking about what learning community means in practice. In short, the approach we take with adults should closely mirror or match our desired approach with students. I am often surprised by the courage and thoughtfulness it takes to do this. I often look at different groups of people that make up our community and ask how we are serving them and how are they linked to us. Are we strengthening our relationship where caring is the core value?

COLLEGE ACCEPTANCES

CONGRATULATIONS TO ALL OF OUR SENIORS WHO HAVE ALREADY BEEN ACCEPTED TO FOUR YEAR COLLEGES! WE LOOK FORWARD TO HEARING MORE GOOD NEWS AS ACCEPTANCES CONTINUE TO COME IN. WAY TO GO SENIORS!

Inside Story Headline

The purpose of a newsletter is to provide specialized information to a targeted audience. Newsletters can be a great way to market your product or service, and also can create credibility and build your organization's identity among peers, members, employees, or vendors.

First, determine the audience of the newsletter. This could be anyone who might benefit from the information it contains, for example, employees or people interested in purchasing a product or in requesting your service.

You can compile a mailing list from business reply cards, customer information sheets, business cards collected at trade shows, or membership lists. You might consider purchasing a mailing list from a company.

Next, establish how much time and money you can spend on your newsletter. These factors will help determine how frequently you publish your newsletter and its length. It's recommended that you publish your newsletter at least quarterly so that it's considered a consistent source of information. Your customers or employees will look forward to its arrival.

Your headline is an important part of the newsletter and should be considered carefully.

Inside Story Headline

You can also research articles or find "filler" articles by accessing the World Wide Web. You can write about a variety of topics, but try to keep your articles short.

Much of the content you put in your newsletter can also be used for your Web site. Microsoft Word offers a simple way to convert your newsletter to a Web publication. So, when you're finished writing your newsletter, convert it to a Web site and post it.

The subject matter that appears in newsletters is virtually endless. You can include stories that focus on current technologies or innovations in your field.

You may also want to note business or economic trends, or make predictions for your customers or clients.

If the newsletter is distributed internally, you might comment upon new procedures or improvements to the business. Sales figures or earnings will show how your business is growing.

Some newsletters include a column that is updated every issue, for instance, an advice column, a book review, a letter from the president, or an editorial. You can also profile new employees or top customers or vendors.

Selecting pictures or graphics is an important part of adding content.

In a few words, it should accurately represent the contents of the story and draw readers into the story. Develop the headline before you write the story. This way, the headline will help you keep the story focused.

One benefit of using your newsletter as a promotional tool is that you can reuse content from other marketing materials, such as press releases, market studies, and reports.

While your main goal of distributing a newsletter might be to sell your product or service, the key to a successful newsletter is making it useful to your readers.

A great way to add useful content to your newsletter is to develop and write your own articles, or include a calendar of upcoming events or a special offer. Your headline is an important
