

THE WOODROW WILSON
National Fellowship Foundation

Woodrow Wilson Early College Initiative Boilerplate Language

Partnerships are the strength of Woodrow Wilson Early Colleges, but the existence of many partners often makes writing and speaking about a school a “mouthful.” The following boilerplate is a short and sweet way to identify as a Woodrow Wilson Early College and explain what that means, while giving recognition to all deserving partners.

Boilerplate

[insert school name], a Woodrow Wilson Early College with [insert college(s) name(s), and other partners as needed], is funded by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. Through active partnerships between college faculty and local school leaders, WW Early Colleges offer high-need students rigorous college-level courses as well as practical skills for college success. WW Early Colleges, facilitated by the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, are part of a national Early College High School Initiative coordinated by Jobs for the Future.

The boilerplate is modular: Sentence 1 is the most important and, if space is tight, is fine by itself. Sentence 2 would be added if there’s room, then Sentence 3.